

The Evidence

2Ti 3:16 All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness:

Under Sea Springs

Gen 7:11 In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, the seventeenth day of the month, the same day were all the fountains of the great deep broken up, and the windows of heaven were opened.

This verse was written by Moses around 1440 B.C. In this verse, Moses talks about fountains of the deep or under sea springs. Nearly 3000 years later, in the 16th century, man was just beginning to create rudimentary devices that would allow a person to stay under water for more than one breath. An additional 460 years would pass before under sea springs were first recorded off the coast of California in the 1960's. Yet, Moses had written about undersea springs 3500 years earlier. How could it be? These fountains of the deep were mentioned again in Proverbs.

Pro 8:28 When he established the clouds above: when he strengthened the fountains of the deep: ~ Solomon wrote that between 950-750 B.C. Is "fountains of the deep" too vague? Would it be more convincing if the Bible actually said springs of the sea?

Job 38:16 Hast thou entered into the springs of the sea? or hast thou walked in the search of the depth? ~ This verse in Job was written between 1000-900 B.C. The writers of these verses had knowledge that no one else had.

A Round Earth

Job 26:7 He stretcheth out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing. Job 26:10 He hath compassed the waters with bounds, until the day and night come to an end. ~ These verses seem to say that the earth is suspended in space and then implies that the earth is round, yet these verses were written by Solomon between 1000-900 B.C. The mere concept of a spherical earth did not arrive until between 600-500 B.C. Would it be better if the Bible simply said the Earth is a circle?

Isa 40:22 It is he that sitteth upon the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof are as grasshoppers; that stretcheth out the heavens as a curtain, and spreadeth them out as a tent to dwell in: ~ This was written by Isaiah between 740-680 B.C. Again, the writers of these verses had knowledge that no one else had.

Resting the Land

Exo 23:10 And six years thou shalt sow thy land, and shalt gather in the fruits thereof: Exo 23:11 But the seventh year thou shalt let it rest and lie still; that the poor of thy people may eat: and what they leave the beasts of the field shall eat. In like manner thou shalt deal with thy vineyard, and with thy oliveyard. ~ These words from the book of Exodus were written between 1445 - 1405 B.C. They tell us that once every seven years the land should be allowed to lie fallow. Modern technology confirms that this practice leads to improved soil conditions and allows for the continued use of farm lands over long periods of time. The earliest secular account of letting the land lie fallow comes from Roman literature written sometime after 1000 B.C. which is over 400 years after it was written in Exodus.

Unhealthy Eating

Lev 3:15 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away. Lev 3:16 And the priest shall burn them upon the altar: it is the food of the offering made by fire for a sweet savour: all the fat is the LORD'S. Lev 3:17 It shall be a perpetual statute for your generations throughout all your dwellings, that ye eat neither fat nor blood. ~ These verses were written between 1445 B.C. and 1405 B.C. Over 3400 years later, modern science has caught up, and we are now told that a major risk factor for developing heart disease and diabetes is the consumption of saturated fats. The earliest secular evidence documenting the link between cholesterol and coronary artery disease was its discovery by Russian scientist Nikolai Anichkov in 1912. Caleb Parry did publish his findings that Angina Pectoris was caused by obstructed Coronary Arteries in 1779, but he failed to link it to cholesterol or saturated fats. Regardless, his findings still came more than 3100 years after Leviticus was written. The specific fat that is prohibited in Leviticus is referred to as Chelev or sometimes Cheilev by people of the Jewish faith. Many sources report a biochemical difference between Chelev and other fat. Is it a mere coincidence that the Bible tells us not to eat fat? Did God really want the fat, or could it be that God was trying to protect humanity (God's creation) from a danger that would not be known to secular man for another few thousand years? It sounds like something any parent would try to do for his or her children.

The Water Cycle

Amo 5:8 Seek him that maketh the seven stars and Orion, and turneth the shadow of death into the morning, and maketh the day dark with night: that calleth for the waters of the sea, and poureth them out upon the face of the earth: The LORD is his name: ~ Here Amos tells us that God calls the waters of the sea and pours them out upon the land. This is a clear description of the cycle of water as it is evaporated from the seas and falls back to earth as rain. Amos wrote this about 755 B.C. The book of Job also describes the process of evaporation distilling the water then pouring down as rain. Job 36:27 For he maketh small the drops of water: they pour down rain according to the vapour thereof: Job 36:28 Which the clouds do drop and distil upon man abundantly. ~ The book of Job was written between 900-1000 B.C. Modern secular science did not catch up on this issue until relatively recently. Here is a quote from the paper titled Concepts of the Hydrological Cycle. Ancient and Modern by James C.I. Dooge, Centre for Water Resources Research, University College Dublin. "For over two thousand years the dominant theory was that, water stored in the sea found its way into the interior of the earth was lifted by some mechanism or other within the mountains and emerged at a higher level as springs to feed the streamflow returning water to the sea. The modern concept of the cycle, based on the premise that rainfall was more than adequate to account for streamflow, gradually strengthened from the end of the 17th Century onwards but was only universally accepted in the 20th century." ~ This paper goes on to describe the theories of some of the secular great minds of the past such as Homer (c. 1000 B.C.) who thought the earth was floating on an ocean. The paper includes this information about Plato. "Plato (c. 390 B.C.) postulated a great underground lake from which the water rose through veins in the rocks and earth. Aristotle (c. 350 B.C.) suggested a mechanism whereby "air" (i.e. water vapour) would rise and then condense at sub-surface levels." ~ This paper also provides a quote from Leonardo da Vinci from around 1500 A.D. "Of the raising of the water to the mountains, which acts like water that raises up through plants to the summits, as seen in vines when they are cut; and as the blood works in all animals so water does in the world, which is a living animal" ~ At about the same time Homer was postulating the earth floating on an ocean, Solomon was writing the book of Job in which he describes the evaporation cycle. Amos was describing the water cycle hundreds of years before Plato or Aristotle were born. We again see the Bible well ahead of the secular scientific community. Is it chance or is it inspiration?
